2006 Youth of the Year

Claire Flatman

According to Claire, recognition from the Chamber of Commerce in 2006 was one of many ways in which the Haliburton community offered her opportunities and support to develop the skills and confidence she is now using. After receiving her BMus at the University of Western Ontario, she entered the University of Ottawa's law school where she is now in her last year.

Her community involvement continues. She volunteers with Lawyers Feed the Hungry, mentors first-year law students, and is involved with an organization offering legal support to groups and individuals sponsoring refugees.

In the spring Claire will be articling with the Ministry of the Attorney General in Toronto.

2014 saw her marrying her high school sweetheart Karl Kadwell.

2008 Youth of the Year

Mitchell Rea

Already very involved in school and various community organizations, winning this award "...boosted my desire to work with people," Mitch says. He credits former high school principal and current school trustee Gary Brohman with supporting his efforts.

Now working on his Co-op MBA at McMaster University where he can combine his studies with work experience, Mitch will finish his degree in December 2016. The list of corporations he has worked for include RBC Insurance and General Motors and this summer he will be at the 3M Corporation, engaged in product development. And what does the future hold for him career-wise? While he can't predict that yet, he knows he wants to be involved with community.

Teghan Dodds

For Teghan, Co-Chair in 2010 of the HHSS Student Activity Council, this award reminded her that anyone can make a difference in their community. A formerly shy student, her various school and community activities in sports and art taught her that to succeed she had to push herself outside her comfort zone. This developed her leadership skills.

Currently at the University of Waterloo where she is finishing her last semester in Fine Arts and Business Teghan is active in her sorority and as a Peer Success Coach. The sorority has enabled her to travel. In the future she hopes to incorporate her love of the arts and creativity with her passion for nature and working with people.
